Institute Day - March 3, 2006

Subject: All Subjects, Teachers and Administrators, Grades K-12

Title: Relational Intelligence: Enhancing Achievement of Children in Poverty Through Relationship

Description: Children living in poverty face numerous challenges which impede optimal learning. Renowed author Ruby Payne proposes relationship building as crucial in motivating these students and improving their scholastic achievement. In this workshop we will learn a powerful and practical relational system to enhance trust, respect and cooperation between teachers and students. We will have an opportunity to practice this step-by-step road map to stronger relationships. In addition, the practice of this model increases emotional safety in the classroom, thus creating a more fertile ground for learning.

Institute Day - March 3, 2006

Subject: All Subjects, Grades 4 - 8

Title: Reading Informational Text

Description: Once students have learned how to read, they must read to learn. Today's students receive very little instruction in strategies to read informational text, yet most of their life as students and adults requires reading and understanding a variety of informational text. This workshop will present background and a variety of simple, yet proven strategies that will build teachers' knowledge and skills for instructing students in Grades 4-8 on how to read and understand informational text. Teachers will leave the workshop with strategies they can use immediately in their classrooms.

Title: Teaching All Learners with Jim Grant

Description: Students are different in many ways. Yet you are asked to teach every student with the same curriculum, with the same textbooks, and often with the same instructional delivery. This one-size-fits-all approach is not only frustrating, it's counterproductive. But, it doesn't have to be. The more ways we teach, the more students we reach.

Learn the time-saving tools you need to effectively determine what every student needs in order to move them to the next level of learning. Discover dozens of easy-to-use, highly effective strategies and materials that will help you teach a wide range of learners.

Institute Day - March 3, 2006

Subject: Career & Technology Educators

Title: Common Problems, Common Goals

Description: Keynote speaker, Michigan State's Dr. Phil Gardner, sets the tone for the day's theme, "Common Problems, Common Goals," expanding on last year's focus, the "millennial student." What are students' attitudes toward future careers? Are they academically ready for the rigorous post-secondary-level classwork today's highly technical careers demand? Gardner addresses common weaknesses and how high schools can develop intervention strategies. An expert panel representing business and academia provides comments and recommendations.

Institute Day - March 3, 2006

Subject: History, Social Studies - Grades 3 - 12

Title: Sleuthing Elusive Sources

Description: Set your students hot on the trail of history's mysteries. More than just learning rote facts and dates, students will discover clues to personal experiences and emotions when they use primary documents. They will be inspired to "open the case" for further investigation and uncover the pros and cons of internet research. Sample case files include the subjects of Civil War, Slavery & Abolition; the Great Depression; WWII; and community history - including investigative techniques that can be applied to any subject in your classroom. Participants will probe archival documents including letters, wills, and legal papers, plus artifacts too. Classroom activities, lesson plans and meeting state standards are included in the dossier.

Location: Wheaton Park District Community Center
1777 S. Blanchard Rd., Center for History Room
Wheaton, IL

Time: 8 am - 2:00 pm
